

Kiron Launches with AGTech in Global Deal

(Hong Kong, May 12, 2020) - Specialist virtual games provider Kiron Interactive (“Kiron”) and lottery & gaming supplier AGTech have agreed on a global collaboration agreement which will include the distribution of the party’s respective products internationally.

Kiron’s premier virtual games offering, including football racing, a variety of localized sports and numbers games, will be integrated into AGTech’s brand new platform and offered alongside the equivalent real sports markets.

The parties have agreed that Kiron’s content will be made available to AGTech’s client base internationally, including markets in Asia, Latin America and Africa, with plans to implement the products across a variety of delivery channels in each territory.

Steven Spartinos, Co-CEO of Kiron, said: “Our partnership with AGTech will provide a springboard for growth globally and we are looking forward to partnering with them and roll out our virtual portfolio to their clients in key international markets. ”

“Our offering provides a broad range of virtual sports and number games that have proven appeal in a multitude of markets. This partnership demonstrates the growing appetite for our portfolio on a global basis.”

Charlie Zhang, VP of AGTech said: “Kiron’s virtual offering delivers on all counts, from the graphics and visuals to the broad range of rapid-play betting experiences available 24/7. ”

“Our goal is to deliver the best content available in the market as a 2B service provider to our partners, and launching Kiron’s portfolio will add an extra dimension to our latest product portfolio.”
